

All of the Worldview Academy staff, directors, and faculty raise money to serve with Worldview Academy. We have found that through raising support we are actually able to share God's work through Worldview Academy with those that assist us.

save your pennies

This may sound like a childish way to save your money, but saving pennies really does add up. And don't limit your change-hoarding to just pennies. Go for the nickels, dimes, and quarters. Think big. Think silver dollars. One Worldview student has found that "setting aside $10 per week stacks up pretty fast when you have enough time."

sell your talent

It's amazing what people will buy, especially for a good cause. Get creative and think outside the box! What are you good at? Could you sell this item or skill? Mow lawns, clean houses, walk dogs, bake goodies, sell items at a local craft show, or put on a local concert (if you are the musical type). One alumni student in Illinois raised money by selling homemade cinnamon rolls. Another student in Minnesota sold "camp coffee"--speciality coffee and tea drinks for $2 each--at his local church. "I was surprised by how many people bought some!" One Worldview staffer advises, "Pretend you are Worldview Academy staff on opening day. You'll get plenty of attention!" Either set a price or make your fundraising donation-based. And remember to inform people about your purpose for raising money.

have a garage sale

A Texas Fall Camp student took this idea to heart. "We did ONE garage sale this year and made enough money for me and my two siblings to go! I'll tell you right now...it was not the garage sale that made the money but God!!!!" In addition to finding unused items around your home, ask your friends and your church to donate items to your garage sale. And remember to tell people what you are raising money for. Most people are usually generous when they see a student willing to work in order to raise money.

serve-a-thon

While having a walk-a-thon or golf-a-thon is a great idea, why not collect pledges for every hour that you serve in your local church or community? Ask your pastor, youth leader, or parent to help you identify some people in your community or church that would be blessed by having projects done for them. Wash windows, pull weeds, remove trash, run errands, cook meals, clean garages, paint, etc.

the empower card (For 2010 Alumni Students)

One of the powerful concepts you learned at camp is also one of the five pillars of servant leadership: empowerment. To truly be a servant leader we must "give away" leadership by empowering others to do the same. Imagine being able to empower another student in your youth group, Bible study, school, church, or neighborhood with a $100 "head start" toward camp. Every 2010 Worldview Academy alumni student has received an Empower Card in the mail. On the front of each card is an individualized code.. Every new Worldview Academy student who uses your Empower Code will receive $100 off their camp tuition and you will receive a $25 tuition credit. Earn your way to camp by brining students to camp. Exercise your influence!
